

SUMPTUARY LAWS IN JEWISH COMMUNAL REGULATIONS

Concern for the Weak and the Struggle against Ostentation

By Professor Nahum Rakover

The result of decades of research, Sumptuary Laws in Jewish Communal Regulations presents hundreds of regulations that deal with consumption of luxuries and show the Jewish community's concern for the weak. These regulations represent legislation from communities all over the world and have been compiled from community records (pinkasim), libraries, and archives in Israel and abroad

Prof. Rakover presents a broad and fascinating picture of the field of sumptuary laws:

- Jewish communal regulations all over the world
- Legislation concerning wardrobe, jewelry, festive meals, and so forth
- Regulations to prevent embarrassment of the poor
- Sumptuary laws in our time
- The self-government of Jewish communities
- Ways of enforcing the regulations

A treasure trove for jurists, historians, sociologists, and folklorists

Two volumes, 1340 pages

Prof. Nachum Rakover, winner of the Israel Prize, AMT Prize, and former deputy attorney general is one of the most distinguished scholars in Jewish law. He has published dozens of books and studies in this field.
